Example Text View Search

UTF-8 | Search

One of the important things to remember about text in GTK+ is that it is in the UTF-8 encoding. This means that one character can be encoded as multiple bytes. Character counts are usually referred to as offsets, while byte counts are called indexes. If you confuse these two, things will work fine with ASCII, but as soon as your buffer contains multibyte characters,